

TRAILER BREAK-AWAY SYSTEM BATTERY MONITOR KIT

Pro Quip's Towing safety meets NSW regulations

Pro Quip International is an automotive accessories company that has been importing Hopkins innovative towing products from the US for over ten years. Hopkins is amongst the top suppliers of towing accessories to the US retail market.

Pro Quip first released its wireless Battery Monitor Kit in 2011 to meet the requirements of the NSW RTA Regulation six, when used in conjunction with the Hoppy 'Engager' Break-Away unit. According to Pro Quip, it was the first company to release a Wireless Break-Away Battery Monitoring System that fully complies with the regulations. The product is also designed and Made in Australia.

Often, battery monitoring systems only measure the voltage of the Break-Away Battery, which alone, is not in compliance with the NSW RTA regulations.

The 'Engager' Wireless Battery Monitoring System is comprised of a transmitter that is wired to the 'Engager' Break-Away battery. A Wireless In-Cab Receiver with simple LED lights is used to indicate the correct state-of-charge of the Break-Away Battery.

The monitoring system load tests the Break-Away battery every time the vehicle's brakes are applied. The kit comes complete with everything needed for installation on trailers, caravans or horse floats. The kit also comes with detailed instructions.

The In-Cab Receiver does not require any hard wiring for installation. It is simply plugged into the cigarette lighter socket of the towing vehicle. This enables it to be easily transferred from one tow vehicle to another.

This also means that any trailer with an 'Engager' Break-Away System and Break-Away Battery Monitor Transmitter installed automatically meets the requirements of the NSW RTA Regulation six.

For fleet operators, or individuals who have more than one vehicle making use of the same trailer, caravan or horse float, extra In-Cab Receivers can be purchased for each towing vehicle. Therefore, no wiring or modifications to the tow vehicle are required in order to meet the requirements of the NSW RTA Regulation six.

Pro Quip International is the exclusive Australian distributor of the Hoppy Range of towing products, including the 'Engager' Trailer Break-Away System, and can be contacted for further assistance with this product.
